National Institute of Corrections

This weeklong training program is targeted to jurisdictions who are in the process of planning, designing and building a new juvenile facility. The program, which uses intensive graphic presentations, hands-on exercises and a facility tour, is repeated yearly at NIC's training school in Longmont, Colorado. Attendees include teams of 5 to 6 persons from four to five jurisdictions around the country. Facility directors, program managers, fiscal and operational as well as maintenance directors are among the staff who attend the training.

The program, presented by IPFYouth and other well-known specialists in their areas, covers the following topics:

- Historical Overview
- Mission and Vision Statements
- Facility Development Process
- Planning Team Role Clarification
- Direct Supervision
- Using Data in the Facility Design Process
- Issues in New Facility Staffing
- Facility Tour
- Operational Programming
- Architectural Programming
- Engaging the Public
- Taking Control of the Project
- Site Evaluation
- Transition and Activation
